Who was the “Son of Destruction/Man of Lawlessness”?

---

- Paul identifies this man as someone who is already at work at the time of his writing the letter to the Thessalonians.
- The reasonable evidence appears to be that this man was the Roman emperor Nero.
  - Nero would soon come to power by reigning over the Roman empire from 54 to 68.
  - He had elevated himself to place of God, calling himself a god.
  - He would later bring a terrible persecution on the church, by blaming Christians for the fire that burned down Rome in AD 64.
- Could this man be someone other than Nero? Absolutely.
- We can't be dogmatic about this interpretation.
